Lemonade

Sweet and juicy, lemonades are best straight off the tree or freshly squeezed on ice! This evergreen citrus tree is usually brought as a grafted tree from your local nursery and produces many large harvests of fruit each year once matured (at around 3 years old). The fruit produced is pale yellow, smooth and round with flesh that has a sweet flavour.

New trees are best planted at the start of Spring in a full sun position, in soil with good drainage, this tree can grow to 2-5 metres high and can also be grown in pots.

Citrus trees are known to be heavy feeders and the hardy Lemonade is no different. It is best to give your tree a dose of well-balanced fertiliser like our Super Phoska Citrus & Fruit blend in February, July & November, sprinkling the fertiliser around the trunk and out to the edge of the canopy of the tree and watering in.

A regular watering regime when the tree is young is important to get it's root system established and once that is done you can water weekly or as needed per the seasons.

Did You Know?

Chickens absolutely love all types of cabbage. Plant some that your chickens can eat and the chlorophyll from the cabbage will help make their egg yolks ultra golden.

“Using Katek fertilizers I have managed to grow the best veggies I have ever grown with minimal effort. I use Super Growth on the veggie garden and Neptune brought my bamboo to life after a dry wet season. The potting mix is the best I have ever bought ,it makes the other brands look like a bag of mulch. Thanks for such great products!”

-  Remove any dead branches from shrubs, trees and perennials once they've sprouted new spring growth.
-  Plant new citrus trees with a handful of Super Growth in the planting hole.
-  Start spring and summer veges and herbs from seed indoors and transplant into the garden once they are around 3cm tall.
-  Prune back hibiscus bushes.
-  Weed gardens and lay down some mulch
-  Keep up a regular watering regime as the weather gets hotter.
